

Being attached to feelings, memories and emotions within us is something we deal with everyday and every moment of our life. Knowing, without noticing, how emotive we are.

Emotions are with us always, this makes our reactions the way they are; stress is a heavy weight that pulls us down, joy lifts up our hearts and makes us smile, confusion is when we go in circles, and at other times we walk and want to just keep walking forever.

My work aims to express this complexity of human emotions that resides within each of us, to reach more deeply ourselves and find what it would look like if we could see that intangible thing called emotions. Focusing on the first impression that we get from a situation and the impact that affects us is the philosophy of my work.
